NUMBER 85

It is not a happy day for the average democrat when he places his affection on an office. The applicants are getting lost at the rate of one thousand a day.

The Rev. Sam Jones is now in Nashville, and says he is going to knock the devil out in one round. If he succeeds he should go to Boston, where the devil seems to have pretty much his own way.

Democratic papers used to find a good deal of fault whenever republican officials rode in special cars furnished by corporations. But the democrats are doing the riding now, and the democratic press doesn't find fault. It seems to make a good deal of difference whose ox is gored.

The ex-R. W. H. Murray has done a great many mean things in his life time—ill-treated his estimable wife, disbarred his church, made a fool of himself on general principles, opened a restaurant in Montreal—and now he proposes to cap the climax by lecturing.

The Harper's Weekly still continues to harp on the "happy results of Cleveland's election." Will the Harper's please name one of the acts of the present administration from which any citizen can draw any pride, or from which the country has drawn any honor?

There are not many offensive partisans holding office now as there were last week.—St. Louis Despatch. The Deepash is mistaken. There are more offensive partisans in office now by five hundred than there were last week. For an example of simon-pure, offensive partisanship, there is nothing that can beat a democrat.

Among the historic things belonging to General Grant which will be soon shipped to the war department and hereafter owned by the government, is a collection of Japanese coins, presented to the general when he was in Japan. Seven of the pieces cost over $5,000. It is the only complete set, except the one now in the Japanese treasury.

A conundrum: If Mr. James Ryan, of Appleton, can't be appointed postmaster because he publishes a partisan democratic paper, why was General Bryant, who edited a partisan democratic paper, appointed assistant attorney general of the postoffice department? Will the Madison Democrat please rise and explain the difference between those two cases?

The monthly report of the national coin exchange presents a very encouraging view of the prospects of that crop, and contrasts strongly with the current reports in regard to wheat. It is stated that the weather in May was very favorable, and that the crop is in a far better condition than it was a year ago. An increase of 636,000 acres is reported in the area in twelve states, and the condition is reported as 104. From this report it would be reasonable to expect a large yield, which may help to compensate the country for the probable deficiency in the yield of wheat.

A rumor has been started by the wise-ones that General Logan has everything fixed up to become the head of the republican ticket in 1888. The arrangement is very simple. It is for Senator Logan to go back to the United States senate—where as the leading republican he will be constantly before the people—avoid a quarrel with the administration and three years hence graciously permit himself to be nominated by the party. Of course people of sense will see that this is all right except that there is not a grain of truth in it. This is about on a par with the statement that there has been a sort of falling out between Mr. Blaine and General Logan.

The Milwaukee Sentinel makes an apology in this fashion: "Grave injustice appears to have been done to Postmaster General Vilas and the democratic administration by a telegram from Appleton to this paper. In that it was charged that Colonel Vilas had been guilty of conspiracy—that because he had insisted on turning republican postmasters out of office for editing newspapers, he would therefore exclude editors of democratic newspapers. But later reports show that there is no basis for this charge. He is appointing democratic editors as rapidly as possible, getting the mighty engine of civilization in a frame of mind to boom the postmaster-general should the occasion arise. Consistency will not be allowed to interfere with the putting in of our friends."

The Hon. William Cogswell, of Massachusetts, leader of the legislature of that state, has positive views that the life insurance laws of the country need a thorough modification. He said the other day, "One of the greatest anomalies in life insurance is in the class and assessment schemes. A man gets a policy for $3,000. He pays for a $3,000 policy. But when he comes to die he gets whatever is left of an assessment. I had a case like that the other day, of a man whose wife had just died. She was insured for $3,000. But he only got $1,000. He had worked and slaved to pay for a $3,000 policy. The same method runs through nearly all life insurance. You are insured for a big amount, but you get what the company is willing to offer in settlement. Investigators are now going on through several legislatures, into insurance methods. I think the result will break up several of the big insurance companies." In the leading stock companies, this discrepancy between the amount expressed in the policy and the amount usually received by the heirs of the deceased, is not known, and therefore, Mr. Cogswell should have been a little more cautious in making the charge of dishonesty against the "big companies," for none of the leading companies have a policy in that way.

THE FAMOUS MAXWELL LAND GRANT.

Commissioner Sparks, of the general land office, has submitted a report to Secretary Lamar upon the famous Maxwell land grant in New Mexico. In 1879 over two million acres of public land were claimed and patented by certain parties, and while there were strong suspicions of fraud connected with the gigantic claim, nothing was done until recently to clear up the title to the land.

The history of the Maxwell grant is one of the most interesting of the many romances of the Rockies. Coming from Washington with the report of Commissioner Sparks, is a graphic account of the success and failure and the influence and poverty of the man Maxwell after whom the grant has taken its name.

The original grant lies in northern New Mexico, is on the line of the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe railway, and is one of the richest and most beautiful tracts of land in all that country. The grant was made by the Spanish-American government to two French trappers.

They were confirmed by the United States at the session that could never be greater in extent than eleven square leagues, or 45,000 acres to one person, so that the Basque-Mirand grant aggregated but 96,000 acres. Mirand died, leaving Basque the sole possessor. The latter married a Mexican belle of the ancient village of Taos, now a mass of ruins, near Santa Fe. Maxwell, an American adventurer, married their daughter, and when she inherited the grant, they established their residence upon it. Maxwell stocked the land with sheep and cattle, which increased amazingly. The history goes on to say that he would enlarge his house to comport with the distinction which he soon earned as the nobel of the west. It spread until it covered acres. Gold poured into his coffers faster and faster, until he scarcely knew what to do with it. A city, equal in wealth and importance to any of the ancient Bengalese communities, grew up around him. The overlaid Santa Fe trail was diverted through it, and it was the ambition of all transcontinental travelers to enjoy a night's hospitality at the famous Maxwell's ranch. Added to all this plenitude, gold mines were discovered in the mountains on the grant in super-abundant quantity, and Maxwell suddenly found himself opulent beyond the wildest dream of mortals. With this new acquisition Maxwell resigned himself to a life of gambling and debauch. He lavished his money on everybody and everything that came within his generous horizon. Poker sharpened thousands of miles in the disguise of officials and judges to rob him at his own fireside, and they all succeeded.

It was only a question of time when the inevitable ruin came. The mines were exhausted, drought prevailed on the stock ranges, and poverty stared the wonderful spendthrift in the face. It was about that time that Jerome B. Chaffee, afterward senator from Colorado, appeared upon the scene. With the assistance of old friends of Maxwell, he procured a bond on the estate. Wilson Waddington, afterwards known to stock as the engineer of the Robinson-mine, went into the deal with Chaffee. After long negotiations and the further depletion of Maxwell's resources, the grant was sold to Holland capitalists. Maxwell realized less than $75,000, and Waddington, Chaffee and their partners cleared millions. The Holland purchasers were deceived, and, subsequent to some litigation in the American courts, surrendered their claim for a trifling sum. A second deal was arranged. Steve Elkins was a party to this. His brother John was the surveyor-general of New Mexico. He was directed to re-survey the grant, so that the patent title could be perfected. It was under his supervision that the unsatisfactory monuments of the original survey were changed so as to enclose 15,000 additional acres. Meanwhile, Maxwell went into a pauper's grave.

A large number of letters and complaints were transmitted to the general office at Washington and the interior department from citizens of New Mexico, alleging fraud in the location and boundaries of this claim, but no investigation was had, but the claim for this enormous region of country appears to have been carried through by official default, without regard to the interests of the government or the rights of citizens of the territory in actual occupancy of the land.

Those in Trouble in Store.—For those who neglect to rectify irregularities of the stomach, liver and bowels, which they foolishly imagine will "cure right of themselves." Of this silly error such persons are usually disabused by the development of some serious chronic malady, traceable to what they were pleased to consider a trifling ailment. Such a case has easily avoided.

A course of Hestert's Stomach Bitters invariably has the effect of removing the secretive action of a torpid liver, restoring healthy digestion and assimilation, and rendering the habit of body perfectly regular. The activity of these all important functions being restored, and the entire system toned and regulated by this incomparable corrective and invigorant, no danger to the general health is to be apprehended from causes which, if not eradicated in time, will assuredly undermine it.

For Those Whose Natures Are Not Capable of Evolving into a Higher Moral Being—A Doctrine That Surprised Plymouth Church.

New York, June 15.—Rev. Henry Ward Beecher proceeded his sermon Sunday morning by an appeal to business men to grant God employs to his holiday on Saturdays during the summer. He said that over the world, North and South, there have been in this mortal embodiment.

Mr. Beecher's sermon was devoted to a reconciliation of the facts of evolution with the fact of human sinfulness. He rejected the theory that in Adam all men sinned, but admitted universal sinfulness. Sin, he said, is transgression of law, but all transgression of law is not sin. In other words, the soul, for which man is accountable, is the seat of the flesh and corrupt inclination, but not of sin. But the most of man's sins have always sprung from infidelity, which they will not be held accountable for, latrinity, or a want of full knowledge and of fully developed moral and physical faculties, is a necessary accompaniment of the unfolding method, which God has chosen to employ in the world. Why did God choose a method which involves at each stage imperfection, infidelity, sinfulness? Why did not God, being supreme, exclude man from the world? The answer is, that man is not yet fit for the world. We only know that friction is an inevitable component of matter. We cannot explain the reason for it.

As to the punishment for sin, Mr. Beecher eloquently denounced the old doctrine of eternal punishment.

It is repulsive, unreasonable, immoral and degrading. I hate it, I hate it, I hate it, because I love my fellowmen. The idea that God created a race and that two of them without experience, put under the temptation of an arch fiend, or whatever the expression may be, should be condemned for ever, is abominable. I do not understand anything about it. And he not only kicked them out of the Garden of Eden (as no parent would ever treat a child in his own house), but then transmitted the corruption that was the result of their act into the race, and that is the reason why I hate it.

I hate it, I hate it, I hate it, because I love my fellowmen.

Mr. Beecher's sermon was well received.

—Children's Day.

How it was Observed in Our City Churches.

A Foulingine Rival for Orléans.

The one Sunday of the year set apart for the children, was observed yesterday by four of the Janesville churches. In the Baptist church, the services were held in the evening, and consisted of mattoe, class responses and singing, making a very pleasing programme.

At the Court Street M. E. church, Rev. C. B. Wilcox preached a children's sermon in the morning. At the conclusion of the church service, the audience were invited into the Sunday school room, where the children helped to observe the day by recitations, songs and responsive readings.

A large audience listened to the Children's Day exercises at the First M. E. church in the evening. The programme consisted of responsive services, singing and recitations. The class motto exercise "Educate for Christ" by 16 girls, and the solo by little Stella Tuckwood were especially praiseworthy.

The Congregational church also had their exercises in the evening, and the responses, songs and readings were listened to with much pleasure by the goodly number present. After the children's part was finished Mr. Will Jefris, the superintendent, introduced Mr. Ament, a missionary from China, who gave a brief but entertaining sketch of the Chinese child's life.

The School for the Blind.

The closing exercises of the Wisconsin school for the blind will take place in the assembly room of the school to-morrow (Tuesday) afternoon beginning at two o'clock. The following excellent programme will be presented:

A few choice residence lots for sale by C. E. Bowles.

"Emersilda;" Saturday evening in the "Hidden Hand." Reserved seats on sale at the ticket office of the opera house from 9 to 12 o'clock a.m., and from 2 to 6 o'clock p.m.

"Last evening a man, full of poor whisky, appeared at the head of the race on River street, and made desperate efforts to have "things" his own way.

He partly succeeded, but in time he could not intimidate, and the first thing the drunken man knew after finding the way was that he was picking himself out of the dust in time for Marshal Hogan to dump him into the "patrol wagon."

He was given a free ride to the county jail.

The pleasant associations of half a score of years were vividly impressed upon the minds of Mr. and Mrs. H. F. Bliss, of the first ward as they entered their home at nine o'clock last Saturday night and found the darkened rooms filled with familiar faces of old time neighbors and friends. The surprise was so well planned and carried out that it was genuine, and the startled family did not fully regain their equilibrium until after refreshments had been served by the guests.

EVANSVILLE, June 15.—Martin Menchen is crushed to death by a freight car while helping to place it on the track.

Another railroad tragedy occurred at Evansville early this morning, in which Martin Menchen, a young man residing in this city, met his death.

It seems that while Menchen and several others were attempting to replace a derailed freight car, the car tipped. His companions saw the danger and escaped; but even he could get out of the way.

Life is lived in Paris for all the enjoyment that can be got out of it. The streets are clear, and the entire city has a similar appearance, and may be accounted for to a great extent from the fact that no coal is used, wood and charcoal being burned. The large mansions are located outside the city. Sunday is made a day of amusement and pleasure; theaters, concerts, must be given up more to pleasure, than rest or worship. The evenings are bright, and the days are filled with fashionably dressed ladies and gentlemen.

The French are exceedingly kind and obliging to strangers, and very polite and amiable. They are of a nervous temperament and live a fast life. They are very emotional, and a gesture often means more than can be expressed in words, especially if disguised. One forms a favorable opinion of them when they are seen in their own home.

WHITNEY, Conductor.

The body was telegraphed for and will arrive about four o'clock this afternoon.

Neat as yet has been set for the funeral but in all probability it will take place to-morrow, at the home of his grief-stricken parents.
